INSIDER TIP

Not exactly a Gallery or a Museum, Meow Wolf is an Arts and Entertainment Group of nearly 200 artists. Meow Wolf’s House of Eternal Return Exhibit is an immersive art installation brought to life by local artists with the support of Game of Thrones creator, George R.R. Martin. This wildly imaginative art space is filled with interactive technology, and extraordinary environments that will inspire visitors of all ages.
MUSEUMS

With more than a dozen museums, Santa Fe County offers miles of exploration devoted to the region’s unique history, art, and culture. Whether you’re interested in ancient Pueblo people, the Spanish Colonial era, the region’s mining history or its Wild West days, you’ll discover all that and more in an impressive array of fascinating museums located around the County.

Head north to the Poeh Cultural Center, a Native American museum and Gallery, highlighting history and traditional art forms—micaceous pottery, Pueblo Polychrome pottery, hand-carved drums, moccasins and more. Don’t miss the new permanent exhibit, “Di Wae Powa: They Came Back,” a historic collaboration between the museum and the Smithsonian Institution’s National Museum of the American Indian, which returned 100 pots of Tewa origin from six northern New Mexico pueblos dating back to the 19th and early 20th century. The pots, including pitchers, bowls, jars and wedding vases, are now back home, in the region where they were created, and on view in this moving exhibit.

Or visit the Museum of Spanish Colonial Art that documents the history of a Spanish Colonial settlement established in 1740. You can also tour El Rancho de las Golondrinas, a living history museum devoted to the heritage and culture of 18th and 19th century New Mexico.

Stop at the Casa Grande Trading Post and Mining Museum or the Madrid Old Coal Town Museum featuring a turn of the century steam engine. View the world’s largest folk art collection at the Museum of International Folk Art. The New Mexico History Museum and the Palace of the Governors are devoted to the history of New Mexico. Nearby is the country’s oldest church, San Miguel Mission Church, as well as other museums celebrating the region’s multicultural diversity.

NATIVE CULTURE

Native Culture in Santa Fe County offers a fascinating glimpse into ancient traditions and timeless religious ceremonies that are an important part of the history and culture. Past and present are interwoven in ceremonial dances and annual Feast days that pay tribute to patron saints of the Pueblos. Along with traditional Native American dances, Feast days include a bounty of Native foods, such as bread baked in a beehive-shaped outside oven called an horno, mutton stew, and chile, as well as arts and crafts by Pueblo people. A visit to a Pueblo to observe a traditional Native American dance ceremony is a powerful experience. Each dance tells its own story and is performed for a specific purpose, based on the natural progressions of the sun, the moon, and the seasons. Each dance is like a prayer, full of spiritual significance for every dancer and drummer, so it's important for visitors to be respectful. Be sure to familiarize yourself with and observe Pueblo etiquette, as there are strict guidelines. For instance, no photography or recording is allowed, talking during a dance is not permitted, and it is not acceptable to walk into a home without an invitation.

Of the eight northern pueblos, five are located in Santa Fe County. Many have vibrant art communities and some offer world-class casinos, resorts, and golf courses.

FARMERS MARKETS

You’ll find a feast of local flavors at the farmers’ markets in Santa Fe County. Shop for everything from organic beef and poultry to a bounty of fresh produce, artisanal bread and cheese, gourmet salsas and other condiments and, of course, New Mexico’s famous chile — both green and red. The Santa Fe Farmers’ Market is one of the oldest, largest, and most successful growers’ markets in the country. Ranked by Sunset Magazine as one of the “Top Ten Farmers’ Markets,” the year-round market held in the Santa Fe Railyard represents more than 130 farmers and producers in 15 northern New Mexico counties. This is where the community gathers on Saturday mornings during the summer. You’ll often see the area’s top chefs shopping the market early in the morning for that evening’s menu. The market is open year-round and includes a winter art market, as well.

The Eldorado Farmers’ Market is a great place to find fresh produce and dairy products, along with baked goods, jams and jellies, arts, crafts and more. Open seasonally on Friday afternoons, the market takes place in the parking lot at La Tienda at Eldorado Shopping Center, about a 15 minute drive from downtown Santa Fe.

When you shop at the Pueblo of Pojoaque Farmers’ and Crafts Market, you’ll find the freshest of vegetables, fruits, herbs, and other fare, all grown in the Pojoaque Valley and Northern New Mexico. Choose from fava beans and sugar snap peas, cilantro and saffron, peaches and chokecherries. Native crafts and flowers are also offered at this seasonal market, which takes place at the Poeh Cultural Center in Pojoaque.

INSIDER TIP

Shop Pueblo pottery, textiles and jewelry at the Poeh Cultural Center Gift Shop, as well as exclusive original works from local Native American artists that have been featured at the museum.

INSIDER TIP

Early September is a favorite time of year to shop the farmers markets, as New Mexico’s famous fresh green chile is ready to harvest. The air is filled with the earthy aroma from vendors outside chile roasting. Prized for its unique flavor, green chile is a staple in traditional northern New Mexico cuisine as well as contemporary fare. Discover more by visiting: santafenmtrue.com/farmers-markets.
ELEVATED ELIXIRS

Raise a glass of craft beer or spirits while you’re here, and chances are your beverage was brewed in New Mexico. With some 75 award-winning breweries and distilleries, New Mexico is “The Frontier of Beer,” according to the New Mexico Brewers Guild, with some breweries applying a true farm-to-table approach by growing their own hops. New on the scene, Beer Creek Brewing Co. occupies a rambling stone building off Highway 14. Here you can pair a frosty beer—made with hops grown on the brewery’s four-acre hop farm just south of the restaurant—with live music and hearty food. Beer Creek is known for specialty pizza, such as the Rio Grande with barbecued chicken and The Rancher, a meat combo. Also choose from pasta, sandwiches, salads and tasty desserts. Beer Creek hosts the annual Hoptoberfest. This rowdy revelry brings together breweries and hop farmers, and 2,000 cups of some 14 different beers are poured for an appreciative crowd. Beer Creek’s Rich Headley describes the area’s craft beer boom as a “Farm to Tap” movement and is thrilled to see the breweries collaborating.

Tumbleroot Brewery and Distillery produces stellar spirits, blending organic and wild-harvested ingredients to create whiskey, rum, gin, vodka and agave spirits. Made from scratch varieties include Blanco Rum, Agave Vodka and Honey Hibiscus Wheat. Try a tasting at their Distillery and Tasting Room, located on Bisbee Court, or at the Tumbleroot Taproom, Stage and Marketplace on Agua Fria, serving food and featuring live music.

The Santa Fe Brewing Company opened 30 years ago as New Mexico’s first craft brewery. Today, it’s the state’s largest, producing flagship beers such as Happy Camper IPA, seasonal ale and limited edition offerings with four varieties of hops grown next to the Rio Grande in Rinconada. Check out the brewery’s brand new Beer Hall at HQ, a sleek, multi-story venue with a beer garden, over 30 beers on tap, cider, wine, and pub grub. You can also sample award-winning beer at the brewery’s lively Eldorado Taphouse, offering 14 taps of fresh beer. Sip your suds inside or, if the weather’s nice, on the patio with great views. Or, visit the brewery’s BrakeRoom taphouse in Santa Fe. The Bridge at Santa Fe Brewing Company is a great music venue to enjoy a frothy beer, while listening to top touring and local bands and musicians.

INSIDER TIP

To see how New Mexico’s award-winning beer is made, take the Santa Fe Brewing Company’s free tour, held on Saturdays at noon. You’ll view the fermenters and tanks used in the production process and get a look at the packaging process. The half-hour tour ends in the tasting room, where you’ll sample some of New Mexico’s amazing ales.
SHOPPING

Artist Studio Tours

The annual Artist Studio Tours in Santa Fe County introduce you to painters, potters, jewelry makers and other artists who you’ll often find working in their studios. The tours take you to scenic towns and villages during the most beautiful seasons of the year. Pick up maps while there to guide you as you walk from studio to studio. You’ll be inspired by the artistry of the region, too, with stunning mountains, mesas and endless turquoise sky. The annual schedule includes the Eldorado Studio Tour, the Santa Fe Studio Tour, the Pojoaque River Art Tour, the Galisteo Studio Tour and the La Cienega Studio Tour.

Santa Fe Flea Market at Buffalo Thunder

Looking for gold? You’ll find that and more, from treasured turquoise jewelry and imported fine rugs to cool clothing, vintage household goods, photography, and exotic spices at the Santa Fe Flea Market at Buffalo Thunder. Open every weekend at the Hilton Santa Fe Buffalo Thunder Resort, the market offers great bargains. The market moves inside the resort during the cold winter months. Stop to shop and you’re sure to “find your treasure,” as the flea market’s motto promises.

Nambé Trading Post

As you take the High Road to Taos, don’t miss the historic Nambé Trading Post, an authentic and eclectic shop located 20 minutes north of Santa Fe. One of the few remaining trading posts from the days of the Old West, this fabulous find is filled with wondrous Navajo weavings, Pueblo pottery, Plains Indian beadwork and quillwork, katchina dolls, old pawn jewelry, cowboy boots and hats, antique saddles and even contemporary work by local artists. But that’s only a glimpse of all that’s available in this one-of-a-kind trading post, owned and curated by Emmy Award-winning costume designer Cathy Smith.

INSIDER TIP

In the historic village of Chimayó, the weaving tradition dates back to the original Spanish colonists. Ortega’s Weaving Shop and others in Chimayó are a symbol of authentic New Mexican traditions for locals and collectors worldwide. With precise attention to detail and with your color choice in mind, the weaver will create a one-of-a-kind pattern on a garment fashioned specifically for you.
WORLD-CLASS SPAS

Relax and rejuvenate your body, mind, and spirit with a getaway to one of Santa Fe County’s world-class spas and spa resorts. Ten Thousand Waves Spa and Resort, the Spa at Four Seasons Resort Rancho Encantado, and Sunrise Springs – an Ojo Spa Resort – all offer specialty spa treatments that will restore your soul, revive your body, and refresh your mind.

Soak in outdoor hot tubs nestled in alpine mountains at Ten Thousand Waves, inspired by traditional Japanese mountain hot spring resorts. Relax with a soothing massage or a facial. Then reinvigorate with sauna bathing, exfoliate with a Salt Glow body scrub, and enjoy an herbal wrap treatment.

Check into Four Seasons Resort Rancho Encantado with a spa offering regionally-inspired treatments. Soothe and balance your skin with a full body scrub and massage, integrated with their Enchanted Prickly Pear Oil infused with aloe and citrus essential oils. Then indulge in their signature back scrub, which is made with piñon nuts and enriched with mountain lavender.

Sunrise Springs is a tranquil oasis of towering cottonwoods and a natural spring-fed pond, where you’ll find a wellness spa blending Eastern and Western therapeutic practices. Relax in the Repose Pools, blissful tubs of artesian spring-fed waters placed by the side of a peaceful pond, and then take a swim in the Saltwater Pool. Unwind in a private outdoor soaking pool, Ojitos, or a mineral-infused soaking tub. Nourish your mind with experiential activities centered on horticulture and gardening, as well as expressive arts, such as painting and creative journaling. Play a round of disc golf or learn the art of hatchet throwing. For more joy, spend time playing with puppies or cuddling cats and kittens to lower stress and anxiety. You can also cuddle miniature Silkie chickens, and hear them purr.

You’ll come away feeling refreshed and revitalized – ready to explore all that Santa Fe County has to offer. Find more information at: santafenmtrue.com/spas.

INSIDER TIP
You’ll find an impressive array of spa treatments and services that reflect northern New Mexico, from massages with desert sage essential oils to blue corn and honey exfoliations.
ALONG THE TURQUOISE TRAIL

LEGENDS & LANDSCAPES

A meandering drive along the 62-mile historic Turquoise Trail National Scenic Byway takes you into majestic mountain country and back to the days of the Wild West, when boomtowns were packed with miners searching for gold and the region’s famous turquoise. Saloons, opera houses and vaudeville theaters provided entertainment, and gunslingers and “Wanted Men” were drawn to the dusty mining towns.

Take Cerrillos Road (NM State Highway 14) south from Santa Fe. As soon as you drive under Interstate 25, you are on the Turquoise Trail National Scenic Byway. A day trip along the Turquoise Trail begins in the Village of Cerrillos, where turquoise has been mined for more than a millennium. Stroll the dirt streets past rustic buildings now housing shops and galleries, such as Cerrillos Station Mercantile, and imagine Cerrillos as a booming frontier town visited by the likes of Theodore Roosevelt and Thomas Edison. Stop for lunch at the Blackbird Saloon, a restored 1880s saloon, or take a picnic to Cerrillos Hills State Park. There, you can hike scenic trails to abandoned mines and enjoy breathtaking views of the Galisteo Basin. To travel to the State Park from the center of Cerrillos, travel north on First Street. Cross the railroad tracks and follow Park signs. Veer left onto County Road 59. The main parking is on the left.

Drive on to Madrid, where the town’s mining history remains visible in the old miner’s cabins, brightly painted, and now housing galleries, boutiques, and cafes. After you’ve explored the shops, poke around the Old Coal Town Museum to learn about the town’s mining history. Then belly up to the 40-foot lodgepole pine bar and wet your whistle at the historic Mine Shaft Tavern, where you’ll enjoy live music and if you’re hungry – green chile cheeseburgers, a regional favorite. Then finish with a special treat from Shugarman’s Little Chocolate Shop. Choose from green chile cashew, Thai Lemongrass Bark or Freeze-Dried Raspberry Chocolate as a perfect ending to your day trip.

INSIDER TIP

Cerrillos was once considered the capitol of New Mexico. Today Cerrillos, with its dirt streets, is a picturesque reminder of the Old West. Visit the Cerrillos Turquoise Mining Museum and Petting Zoo and the Visitor Center on Main Street. The town has been the setting for several motion pictures and TV series, “Nine Lives of Elfego Baca”, “Young Guns” and “John Carpenter’s Vampires” just to name a few.
EXPLORING ANCIENT PATHWAYS
NATIONAL MONUMENTS, PARKS & PETROGLYPH

Follow in the footsteps of northern New Mexico’s ancestral Pueblo people on this historical day trip, which takes you to ancient ruins and cliff dwellings, petroglyphs, hiking trails with sweeping vistas, and other fascinating sites. This journey will immerse you into a cultural history that is unique to this region, with a living legacy that remains vibrant among New Mexico’s Pueblos today.

Begin at Bandelier National Monument, just 40 miles west of Santa Fe. Here, you’ll journey back through time—more than 11,000 years ago—when a bustling city occupied this site. With more than 70 miles of hiking trails, cliff dwellings, a ceremonial kiva, petroglyphs and a great gift shop, Bandelier offers a rich introduction to the region’s Native American culture.

Just 13 miles from Bandelier’s main park, explore Tsankawi Trail, located on the Pajarito Plateau. Part of Bandelier, but less crowded, Tsankawi offers a spectacular but challenging 1.5 mile hike, with ladders and narrow passageways.

You’re literally following ancient paths carved into the rocks by the 15th century Tewa people who lived there, ancestors of the people of San Ildefonso Pueblo. Keep an eye out for the many petroglyphs, carved in the rocks by the ancient residents of Tsankawi.

At San Ildefonso Pueblo, take a self-guided walking tour of this vibrant art community, one of New Mexico’s most visited pueblos. This was the home of iconic artist Maria Martinez, internationally celebrated for her black-on-black pottery. You’ll see a few of her pieces on display in the pueblo’s Maria Poveka Martinez Museum, named in her honor, along with work by other Pueblo artists. Then meet contemporary artists, who have opened their homes as retail shops.

Just 15 minutes northwest of Santa Fe at Santa Clara Canyon Road and State Road 30 are the Puye Cliff Dwellings, the largest settlement on the Pajarito Plateau. Here you’ll see dwellings on a mesa top, as well as in caves cut straight into cliff faces.

Be sure to visit the Harvey House at the National Historical Landmark, Puye Cliffs. The only Fred Harvey famous hotel and restaurant chain ever built on an Indian reservation is now an interpretive center and gift shop.

THE MIRACLES OF CHIMAYÓ
TASTES & TRADITIONS

Nourish your body, mind, and spirit with a visit to the Village of Chimayó, settled by the Spanish in the 17th century and home to many of their descendants. At the heart of the village is a National Historic Landmark, El Santuario de Chimayó, known as the “Lourdes of America.” The adobe chapel, built in 1816, is famous for its miraculous healing dirt believed to possess curative powers.

For more than half a century, Rancho de Chimayó Restaurante has been serving traditional northern New Mexican fare to locals and visitors alike, in a historic hacienda nestled in the fertile Chimayó Valley. Chimayó is also known for producing famous red chile, which is served at Rancho de Chimayó, honored as an American Classic by the James Beard Foundation.

Chimayó is a vibrant arts and crafts community where centuries-old traditions still thrive. Chimayó weavers produce treasured rugs, blankets, clothing and more, continuing a legacy that dates back 300 years. At El Potrero Trading Post, you’ll find folk art from New Mexico, retablos (images of saints painted on wood), bultos (saints carved from wood), tin crosses and tin retablos. Visit the Chimayó Museum located in the Plaza del Cerro to learn more about the history and the culture of Chimayó and its surrounding communities.

A day trip to Chimayó offers an unforgettable experience, a feast of flavors, a rich cultural heritage, history and more. Follow Highway 84/285 north from Santa Fe. Turn right on NM 503 northeast from Pojoaque. In a few miles turn left onto Juan Medina Road into Chimayó.

For more information, visit: santafenmtrue.com/the-miracleof-chimayo-tastes-and-traditions.

INSIDER TIP

For generations, families in Chimayó have grown the prized red chile that bears the name of their historic village. They began raising the crops in the early 18th century and today, some villagers still roast the chile in outdoor ovens, or hornos, just as they did centuries ago, filling the air with an alluring scent. The shapes of the chile pepper are irregular – some are short, others long, and often they are bent or twisted. Yet after it’s roasted, dried and ground into a powder, Chimayó red chile is world-renowned for its distinctive flavor combining sweetness and spice. New Mexicans use the powder to make a smoky red chile sauce for enchiladas, tamales, huevos rancheros, carne adovada and many other regional dishes. You can buy Chimayó red chile powder to use in your kitchen at the shops near El Santuario de Chimayó.
REVITALIZING A RAILROAD TOWN

A century ago, Lamy was a bustling railroad town with a boutique Harvey House hotel, a mercantile store and saloon, and a Mission Revival-style train depot — a key stop for the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad (A,T & SF) with passengers bound for Santa Fe. The railroad declined with the advent of the automobile, the hotel was demolished, and the dust settled in Lamy, where the population dwindled to a few hundred souls.

But the times they are a-changing, and Lamy is back on track as a revitalized destination. The old saloon, listed on the National Register of Historic Places and now known as the Legal Tender Restaurant and Saloon, has been restored to its former glory, with a handsome bar you can belly up to and a card room for poker contests. There’s also a stage for melodramas and music, spacious dining rooms, patios and railroad cars for private dining. The menu features contemporary takes on Fred Harvey fare — oyster stew, vichyssoise, borscht, Swedish meatballs—and other innovative cuisine.

Across the street, in the old train depot, the Chili Line Brewery Taproom is a hot spot. Rub elbows with the locals, as you drink locally made lagers, pilsners and other ales in a former luggage storage room. Or grab a track-side seat on the patio, so you can wave at the passengers when the Amtrak Southwest Chief rolls in, and they’ll wave right back. Enjoy gourmet pub grub from Harvey’s Cafe, such as lobster rolls, pierogis and Parisian-style ham and cheese baguettes, and listen to great tunes by local musicians.

Where else can you shop for eclectic art in a 1905 refrigerator railroad car? Check out the El Ortiz Gift Shop & Gallery — filled with ceramics, jewelry, metal work and more, all handcrafted by local artists.

Visit the on-site museum documenting railway history in Lamy, New Mexico and the Southwest to learn more about this fascinating era.

OUTDOOR ADVENTURE
FUN IN EVERY SEASON

Santa Fe County is an outdoor adventurer’s paradise. With more than 300 sunny days a year, this high desert mountain country offers world-class hiking, mountain biking, and skiing, as well as horseback riding, fishing, and golfing in some of the country’s most stunningly scenic surroundings. The dramatic vertical cliffs at Diablo Canyon provide some of the best rock climbing you’ll find anywhere. After just one visit, you’ll see why USA Today calls Santa Fe the best destination for outdoor enthusiasts.

Santa Fe County is well known for the beautiful fall colors of the aspens. Enjoy them during a hike, while biking or on a drive. The leaves begin changing around the third or fourth week of September, especially in the high valleys.

Snowbirds flock to Ski Santa Fe, with a peak elevation of 12,075 feet (the 12th highest ski area in North America) and 83 trails for skiers and snowboarders of all levels. Located just 16 miles from downtown Santa Fe, the ski area receives 225 inches of snow on average every year, offering family fun and majestic, panoramic views. Cross-country skiers and snowshoers have plenty of trail options, too. For hikers, Santa Fe County offers more than 478 miles of pristine trails to explore year-round. In summer, you’ll see fields filled with colorful wildflowers; in winter, snow-covered trails and alpine trees truly are enchanting. Keep an eye out for wildlife — birds, deer, elk, antelope, coyotes and more.

With long ascents, steep technical downhill, flow trails and cross country loops, Santa Fe County is a mecca for mountain bikers, ranked by USA Today as one of the country’s top mountain biking towns and a recipient of the Silver-Level Rider Designation by the International Mountain Bicycling Association (IMBA). With a network of trails just outside your door, you’ll find a variety of terrain suitable for all levels.

You can also explore Santa Fe’s majestic mountains and mesas on horseback or enjoy the solitude of angling for Rainbow, Brown and Brook trout and fishing in mountain lakes and streams. The Santa Cruz Lake Recreation Area is a fantastic fishing spot, as the lake is stocked with Rainbow and Brown Trout. Set in the foothills of the Sangre de Cristo Mountains, just 31 miles from Santa Fe, this scenic recreation area, surrounded by sandstone hills, is also a great spot for boating, rafting, hiking and camping and a beautiful place for a picnic.

If golfing is your sport, the gorgeous high desert terrain offers a number of unique, memorable courses.

For unforgettable outdoor fun, take a guided tour with Santa Fe Mountain Adventures, which offers invigorating hikes, custom mountain biking trips, and 4x4 expeditions, as well as snowshoe and cross-country skiing trips. Or, cruise Santa Fe’s famous turquoise skies on a Gryphon Renaissance Helicopter tour. You could soar over the Rio Grande or the Ortiz Mountains or book a night tour for a romantic view of city lights.

Get all the details about Santa Fe’s great outdoor adventures at: santafenmtrue.com/outdoor-adventures.

INSIDER TIP
For an unforgettable off-road adventure, head out on a rugged jeep tour with Santa Fe Jeep Tours. A four-wheel drive expedition through the high mountain desert and alpine forests takes you to some of the area’s most majestic places. Sign up for a guided jeep tour that takes you into the magnificent rock formations of Diablo Canyon, or choose from an array of other tours. You can also bring your own jeep for a self-guided tour of the Santa Fe National Forest, and enjoy some of the finest scenery in the Southwest. Be sure to pick up a map at the Santa Fe National Forest office before you go to find out which areas you’re allowed to explore.
WATERFALL WONDER

One of the most striking natural waterfalls in the Southwest lies in the foothills of the Sangre de Cristo Mountains, north of Santa Fe. Here, in the Nambé Falls and Lake Recreation Area located within Nambé Pueblo land, cascading water tumbles from 100 feet through a sheer-walled gorge, creating three tiers of wondrous falls.

Two short trails, each a quarter-mile long, provide easy access. One route leads up a hill to magnificent views of the falls from above. The other trail crosses a river and takes you to a beach at the lowest pool of the falls.

Nambé Dam and Lake Recreation Area, located above the falls, provide natural pools that are popular fishing spots and great places to play in the cool mountain water. Nambé Falls and Lake Recreation Area, is open to the public for camping, hiking and fishing, with an entry fee. Bring your own kayaks, rafts, canoes and other watercraft, and explore the lake. There’s also a picnic area, and pets are permitted as long as they are kept on a leash and you clean up after them. Note that the area is closed during winter and also for sacred pueblo observances.

INSIDER TIP

Nambé Falls and Lake Recreation Area offers a great adventure for outdoor enthusiasts but it helps to arrive prepared. Be sure to bring plenty of drinking water. And, if you hike the lower trail you’ll likely get wet, so wear water shoes and safeguard your belongings in a waterproof pack.
DALE BALL TRAILS

Nearly 25 miles of mountainous majesty are yours to explore on the Dale Ball Trails, which wind their way through the famous foothills of the Sangre de Cristo Mountains. This extensive network of high altitude desert trails passes through juniper forests and across seasonally dry creek beds, revealing rock gardens resembling Zen formations. Along the way, the panoramic views are simply stunning.

Popular with hikers, snowshoers, and mountain bikers, the trails cover a wide swath of terrain between Santa Fe County, the City of Santa Fe and the Santa Fe National Forest. A good place to begin is at the parking lot, located at the intersection of Hyde Park Road and Sierra del Norte, on the way to Ski Santa Fe. Trail maps are available, along with an advanced wayfinding system to guide you.

INSIDER TIP

The Dale Ball Trails offer some of the best places to hike and run in the country, according to Travel + Leisure and Sherman’s Travel. In part, that’s due to the helpful wayfinding, or sign system. Just look for the 1-2-3 signs and other numbered route markers and you’ll soon be navigating like a seasoned Sangre de Cristo hiker.

SANTA FE RAIL TRAIL

Hop on the 15 mile Santa Fe Rail Trail for a ride straight into railroad history, not to mention beautiful countryside. This multi-use trail parallels Santa Fe’s railway line, running between the historic railroad town of Lamy – the closest Amtrak stop – and the Santa Fe Railyard. The path is paved for the 3.5 mile stretch between downtown and the Rabbit Road access point, accommodating bike commuters, as well as hikers and runners.

At Rabbit Road, the trail turns to dirt. This is where the real adventure begins. Bordered by juniper and pinon trees, the trail takes you up and down small hills, opening up with scenic views in every direction. It’s perfect for hikers and cyclists of all levels and popular with families, too, because it’s challenging, but not demanding.

INSIDER TIP

Take the Rail Trail to its southern terminus at U.S. Highway 285 near Lamy, and you’ll reach the spot where Santa Fe’s railway spur connects with the historic Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Rail Line.
RIDING, ROPING AND JUMPING

From international equestrian events and polo matches to guided horseback tours through stunning scenery, Santa Fe County is an exciting destination for horse lovers.

The Stanley Cyclone Center, New Mexico’s equine, livestock and event venue, hosts rodeos, open riding, carriage racing, training clinics, and more. Admire the beauty of equestrian vaulting and the pageantry of horse shows, or take in a dog show, a livestock show and 4H/FFA activities.

On the lavish green grounds of HIPICO Santa Fe, you can thrill to the thundering hooves of horses year-round. This world-class equestrian facility hosts national and international equestrian competitions, as well as annual events, including the Santa Fe Summer Series and Charity Grand Prix de Santa Fe. You can watch a riveting polo match from a VIP tent and cheer on hunter/jumper competitions with a Southwest flair. When you’re ready to saddle up and ride off into the sunset, take a guided horseback tour with area outfitters. Morning, afternoon and moonlight excursions are also available for riders of all levels. You’ll explore mountains, mesas, canyons and more, riding Tennessee Walkers and Missouri Fox Trotters. Join a group ride or arrange for private tours.

INSIDER TIP
The groundbreaking equestrian program, EQUUS, practices a decade-old field known as equine integrated learning. Visitors learn about nonverbal communication and setting boundaries, gaining confidence, inspiration, and strength. CERRILLOS HILLS STATE PARK

Just off the Turquoise Trail National Scenic Byway, in the old mining town of Cerrillos, sits a treasured State Park with an enthralling history. Occupying 1,098 acres, Cerrillos Hills State Park is a wonder to explore, with hills that are remnants of volcanoes, formed 30 million years ago. Native Americans began to mine these hills over 1,100 years ago for lead used in pottery glaze and later for turquoise. Next came Spanish conquistadors and colonists seeking silver, followed by 18th-century prospectors pursuing treasure.

Today, Cerrillos Hills offers something for everyone, from hiking and mountain biking to birding, picnicking and other activities. Five miles of interpretive trails lead past old closed mines revealing the area's rich mining history. The abundant wildlife, many hiding from view, includes foxes, coyotes, mule deer, bobcats and cougars. You may spy a golden eagle, a great horned owl or one of the other 30 bird species that have been identified in the park. To find out about guided hikes and other year-round events, check the State Park's Visitor Center schedule.

INSIDER TIP
For a spectacularly scenic guided tour, rent a horse from an area outfitter. You’ll ride through rolling juniper covered hills with majestic views of the surrounding Sandia, Ortiz, Jemez, and Sangre de Cristo mountain ranges.
Hyde Memorial State Park

Nestled in the Sangre de Cristo Mountains, Hyde Memorial State Park is known for its picturesque campgrounds, set in ponderosa pine forests just a short drive from downtown. Not only can you pitch a tent and make use of grills, picnic tables and other amenities, but you can also rent a yurt, which accommodates up to six people.

The park offers prime hiking trails for varying skill and difficulty levels. Along with the stunning views, you can catch glimpses of deer and other wildlife and an array of brightly colored wildflowers. In the fall, the park offers breathtaking views of New Mexico’s iconic fall colors — golden fields of aspens. In winter, this is a popular spot for sledding, snowshoeing and cross-country skiing. For those looking to plan outdoor weddings and events throughout the summer months, Hyde Memorial State Park and its Historic Lodge is the perfect outdoor location with stunning natural scenery.

Insider Tip

Hyde Memorial State Park has something for everyone. With wi-fi available at the visitor center, vault toilets, and yurts equipped with propane heaters, fire rings and food safes (no electricity), campers can get a taste of the wild without giving up all amenities. For those looking to ‘rough it’ the park’s campsites provide great opportunities to spend time unplugged in nature.

Glorieta Battlefield Trail

Immerse yourself in Civil War history along the Glorieta Battlefield interpretive walking trail, which is part of the Pecos National Historical Park. This 2.35 mile walk takes you through parts of the Glorieta Pass Battlefield, where Confederate and Union forces battled for three days in March 1862. After the dust had decisively settled, the Union continued to maintain control of New Mexico throughout the American Civil War.

To access the trail, and learn more about New Mexico’s crucial role in the Civil War, stop at the Visitor Center at the Pecos National Historical Park. Here, you’ll receive an access code and directions to the trailhead, located five miles southwest. You’ll find interpretive signs along the way, but for more detailed information, purchase the Visitor Center’s map.

Before or after your visit to the Glorieta Battlefield Trail, take a walk around the main loop trail (1.25 miles) at the Pecos National Historical Park to learn about the crossroads of history and culture that defines this national park. You’ll also see ruins and learn about southwest archaeology and ongoing cultural preservation efforts. No reservations necessary.
PECOS NATIONAL HISTORICAL PARK

Located 25 miles southeast of Santa Fe, this over 6,500-acre treasure is the perfect place to explore New Mexico’s fascinating history. Take the trail to haunting ancient ruins of one of the largest pueblos in the Southwest and the remnants of an 18th-century Spanish mission church, evidence of the Spanish who once ruled this region for several centuries. The Santa Fe Trail passed through here, and ruts are still visible.

In addition to fascinating historical lessons, cultural experiences abound. For a magical experience, visit the park in mid-December for the Farolito Walk. This treasured tradition is popular with locals and visitors alike. Walk a one-mile trail to the Spanish mission church and pueblo ruins. The whole way, the trail is illuminated by more than 3,500 farolitos, paper bags filled with sand and a glowing candle. It’s a gorgeous sight. Be sure to dress warmly.

No matter what time of year you visit, Pecos National Historical Park will provide an immersive dive into New Mexico history and culture.

INSIDER TIP

Take the tour of a stylish dude ranch visited by Will Rogers and Charles Lindbergh that became Forked Lightning Ranch, owned by Oscar-winning actress Greer Garson and her husband, Texas oil magnate Buddy Fogelson. Opulent parties held here drew Hollywood celebrities and other luminaries of the past.

INSIDER TIP
During December, enjoy holiday light displays in the historic mining town of Madrid that once diverted the path of commercial airline flights, so passengers could admire them. Stroll Canyon Road on Christmas Eve for the annual Farolito Walk.

WORLD-CLASS EVENTS
Santa Fe County’s calendar of exciting year-round events draws visitors from around the world. Arrive early for world-class opera performances during the summer in a striking, state-of-the-art open air theater. The Santa Fe Opera might seem like an unlikely setting for serious tailgating, but dedicated patrons have been bringing everything from elegantly themed tables to multi-course homemade meals for elaborate pre-opera festivities.

El Rancho de las Golondrinas, the Southwest’s premier living history museum located on 200 acres in a rural farming valley just south of Santa Fe, hosts many events throughout the year, such as the annual Herb and Lavender Festival and Santa Fe’s longest running Wine Festival during the summer months, along with a Renaissance Fair in September.

Ride your bicycle along the scenic countryside, as miles of history pass under your wheels during the annual Santa Fe Century in May. Gaze at the Milky Way beneath glittering skies during a Star Party event, or take a geology hike at Cerrillos Hills State Park. In Madrid, you’ll find a historic theater hosting vaudeville and a Crawdaddy Blues Festival complete with live music and more to kick off spring in May.
WORLD CLASS EVENTS

ZOZOBRA

Say goodbye to all your gloom at The Burning of Zozobra, a 50-foot towering, menacing marionette, otherwise known as “Old Man Gloom.” The event takes place the Friday before Labor Day at Santa Fe’s downtown Fort Marcy Park, drawing thousands of visitors from near and far to cheer on his demise with cries of “Burn him! Burn him!” Zozobra was created in 1924 by Artist Will Shuster, a member of the Santa Fe Art Colony, and has been a beloved part of Santa Fe since 1926. The pageantry includes musical performances, as well as fireworks that celebrate Zozobra’s end...that is, until the next year.

SANTA FE INDIAN MARKET

The Santa Fe Indian Market is not just the world’s largest Native American art market – it’s been the biggest event in town, year after year, since 1922. Avid collectors travel to the Santa Fe Plaza on the third weekend of August to purchase jewelry, pottery, weaving, basketry and other traditionally crafted works directly from 1,000 Native American artists from the U.S. and Canada. Indian Market is also known for live Native music performances, time-honored dances and drumming, a haute couture fashion show and fry bread based Navajo tacos, along with other authentic cuisine.

INTERNATIONAL FOLK ART MARKET

One of the most colorful places on the planet, the International Folk Art Market brings more than 150 artists from 53 countries to Museum Hill to sell their unique folk art. People from around the country travel to shop this market in mid-July, purchasing handmade jewelry, clothing, textiles, paintings and dozens of other one-of-a-kind items. Part of the fun is having the opportunity to meet the artists and talk about their work and where they live. The market also showcases live world music, dance and other performances. Bring your appetite, so you can feast on foods from around the globe.

NEW YEAR’S EVE ON THE PLAZA

Ring in the New Year in Santa Fe style on the historic downtown Plaza, where piñon bonfires and local bands heat up the night. Write down your dreams and hopes for the coming year on a memorial banner, and keep warm with hot chocolate and biscochitos, the official state cookie. When midnight strikes, welcome the New Year with a handcrafted Zia symbol, which rises up into a sky ablaze with fireworks.

CURRENTS NEW MEDIA FESTIVAL

Every year, Parallel Studios hosts a citywide festival of intriguing, interactive works by New Media artists from around the world. Thousands of visitors travel from far and wide to attend CURRENTS New Media Festival, which showcases installations, multimedia performances, animation, robotics, 3D printing, VR and AR environments and many other cutting-edge art forms. The festival appeals to everyone, including artists, collectors and families seeking fun.

INSIDER TIP

No matter what time of year you visit, Santa Fe is a bustling hub of activity with unique events to make your vacation memorable. Be sure to check SantaFeNMTrue.com for updated events before you visit.

INSIDER TIP

Locals love New Mexico’s famous green chile with such a fiery devotion, the pepper has become an integral part of the their identity. In fact, many food experts and chile lovers consider it sacred. You will, too, once you’ve tasted the profound combination of flavors that bursts forth in every bite—sweet, smoky, earthy and often spicy. A staple in restaurants across Santa Fe County, green chile shows up in most regional dishes as well as upscale contemporary fare. Ask any local about the best ways to savor it and you’ll likely hear green chile cheeseburgers, green chile stew, and enchiladas and burritos smothered in green chile. For a more modern take, try green chile pizza, green chile mac’n’cheese and even green chile ice cream.
